The sidewalks are now thirteen feet wide and the plan is to increase the width to fifteen feet. The street is now fifty-four feet wide between the curbs, leaving nineteen and one-half from the curbing to street car rails. The ballef is that the addition to the sidewalk will not in any measure interfere with the belief is that the addition to the sidewalk will not in any measure interfere with the street traffic and will be of great benefit to the people who use the walks. The carbing is in such condition that it will have to be replaced and the expense of widening the walks will be less than the cost of the payement. If the plan meets the approval of the property owners the combination curbing will probably be used, which will still further reduce the cost of the paving. The decided character of the advantage that will be conferred and the material reduction of the cost of the new paving is believed to be sufficient to remove the objections that any of the property owners may entertain.
